Politics Overstepping Limit in Appointments

IF ANYTHING ought to be obvious in Washington these days it is the fact that we have got far beyond the point where we can safely let party politics have a hand in the naming of government servants.

That worked fairly well during our early history, when the federal government's machine was relatively small and affected only a few people. But to go on with it in an era when the government is doing things which affect every individual in the country is sheer madness.

An illuminating case in point is the trouble which is now besetting the Social Security Board.

Rudney Dutcher pointed out the other day that the Senate voted into an appropriation bill a harmless-looking little rider requiring that all of the Social Security Board's appointments who receive more than $5000 a year must be confirmed by the Senate.

X X X
NOW THE Social Security Board is going to have to administer the most tremendous insurance scheme ever conceived into being. Upwards of 26,000,000 Americans are contributing to the funds which it is to care for and disburse. It will need a considerable corps of lawyers, economists, insurance experts and executives, and it is to the interest of the entire country that these people be chosen on a basis of pure merit.

Practically all of these experts will fall in the more-than-$5000-a-year class. And what the Senate is trying to do is remove them from the merit system and make political patronage out of their appointment.

It would be hard to think of a more completely indefensible bit of political chicanery than this.

To the credit of the House of Representatives, it has voted to put all Social Security Board appointees—experts, lawyers and all—under straight civil service rules. The disputed bill is now in conference; and Dutcher reports that the Senate conferees, who are resisting this effort to establish the merit system, include such eminent statesmen as Senators Glass of Virginia, Byrnes of South Carolina, Russell of Georgia, Adams of Colorado and Steiwer of Oregon.

X X X
NOW IS a stand like that to be defended on any rational basis? The answer is clear: it isn't. We could endure that sort of thing 50 years ago, when government employees were comparatively few; we can't possibly endure it now, when they are many and have responsibilities which affect the lives of all of us.

We have heard a good deal of loose talk lately about the destruction of the American form of government. It ought to be pointed out that in the long run no surer way of destroying it could be devised than to give it ever-increasing duties—and compel it to meet them with staffs of "experts" chosen by party hacks for political advantage.

Germany Will Try Again

SAY WHAT you like about the German government, you must admit that it isn't easily scared.

Hard on the heels of news of the Hindenburg disaster comes word that work will be pushed on construction of the big dirigible sister ship, the LZ-130, whose framework is now nearing completion at Friedrichshafen. Air Minister Goering declares that "airship building in Germany must not be discouraged," and it is expected that the new ship will go into commercial trans-Atlantic service before the summer is over.

Coming after so many other dirigible disasters, the Hindenburg crash might well have caused the Germans to throw up their hands and say, "It's just no use." But the Germans seem convinced that the airship has a useful part to play in modern life—and they apparently have the dogged determination to stick with it until they have proved their point.

Proper Diet, Rest, Patience Needed in Fighting Off Coronary Thrombosis

(No. 220)
 Usually the pain of angina pectoris comes on repeatedly in contrast to the pain of coronary thrombosis, which occurs once and remains until the patient recovers.

After a few days, the coronary thrombosis pain in general will become less intense, the blood pressure will begin to rise again, and the shortness of breath will be relieved. After a month or two in bed, depending on the severity of the attack, the patient is considered to be convalescent.

There are instances, however, in which the symptoms persist and in which angina pectoris is superimposed on a previous coronary thrombosis. There remain also the possibility of a second attack of coronary thrombosis some later date, should the patient survive the first attack.

While the patient with coronary thrombosis is in bed, his diet must be supervised very carefully. The diet of the patient with heart disease usually contains fresh fruits and vegetables and fairly small quantities of fluids, but all of the meals should be small, and especially the evening meal.

It is customary to forbid pastries, fried foods, hot breads and similar food substances. These patients are limited to not more than 1200 cc. (one and one-fifth quarts) of fluid a day. These represents such liquids as water, milk, broth, soups, orange juice, tomato juice and similar drinks.

In cases where there is a particularly distressing form of accumulation of gas, patients are put on a milk or buttermilk diet for a few days. They begin to improve, they are given dry or cooked cereals with sugar rather than with salt; chicken, chops, cysters, cooked green vegetables, stewed fruit, especially apple sauce; orange juice and melba toast.

Patients who complain of bad taste in the mouth or who have a dry tongue may be given chewing gum. Most physicians abominate the chewing gum habit in health, but find it exceedingly helpful for a patient with dry mouth or with a bad taste in sickness.

As has been previously mentioned, one of the chief terrors is the ability of the patient to sleep. Physicians are familiar with hundreds of preparations which will help in obtaining sleep, and it is customary to attempt to get a proper result with weaker remedies rather than with strong ones.

Of particular importance is the control of the patient's mind by psychotherapy, or the power of suggestion. The physician may, by talking to his patient, quiet him, make realize the importance of rest, cause him to understand his condition, and relieve him of irritability.

Not infrequently, patients are so worried over their physical condition, once the diagnosis is made, that it may be necessary to give them a word of encouragement to allay their fears.

After the patient has been in bed for as long as the physician thinks necessary, he begins very gradually to extend his activities. Particularly important is the avoidance of nerve or mental strain.

It is interesting that coronary thrombosis occurs more often in doctors, engineers, big business men, and statesmen than in laborers, industrial workers and others who do not have the constant mental strain that affects those in the occupation mentioned.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Judgment Develops With Care

One of the hardest things to teach a child is to make a decision and then contentedly abide by it.

Some children do, of course, those who have faith in their own powers and feel that mistakes are out of their line. This, too, can be a fault, and a child can become so cock-sure that he is always right, that he becomes a hazard to himself and a trial to others.

But by and large, I believe, he is happier than his brother who has only to touch something to have it become discredited in his eyes.

It is a sort of fatalism, this doubting of one's wisdom, this branding of self as forever wrong. "I won't do it right away," becomes a credo of life.

AFRAID to Love

By MARION WHITE ©1937 NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
 JOAN HENDRY, heroine, secretary to John Hendry.
 JOHN HENDRY, mining investment banker.
 BOB ANDREWS, Hendry's junior partner and Joan's fiance.
 SYBIL HENDRY, secretary, John Hendry's niece and Joan's rival in love.
 PHILIP HENDRY, Sybil's brother.
 DOROTHY STARKER, Joan's childhood friend.
 CHARLES NORTON, California mining promoter.

Yesterday, Bob learned Sybil had lied about police suspecting Joan. Police order city-wide search for Joan assuming she may be in danger, since she may have surprised the murderer on the scene.

CHAPTER XXVIII

IT was a different Dorothy Starke who opened the door a short while later for Bob Andrews. Gone was the sparkling gaiety he had become accustomed to expect in her, and in its place was a pitiful desperation. Dark rings encircled her eyes, and her face was white and haggard. Evidently she had had no sleep that night.

"Bob!" she exclaimed when she saw him, "if there is anything at all to mental telepathy, it has worked for me now. I've wanted so badly to see you, and I was afraid to leave a message with the police."

New hope sprang into Bob's eyes. "Do you know where Joan is?" he asked quickly.

She shook her head hopelessly. "No, I don't. But we'll find her, Bob. We've got to. I forced her into this mess, and upon my soul, I'll get her out of it." She led him into the living room and shut the door behind them.

"How did you force her into it?" Bob asked her.

"It's such a long story, Bob. And we've so little time. Let me explain, as quickly as I can. You remember last night at Sybil's, she mentioned something about her brother making a special survey in Chicago, then Seattle, and finally San Francisco?"

"Yes," he phoned, just before we left.

"Do you know just what sort of a survey Philip was making, Bob?"

He shook his head. "No, I don't. Sybil said he had a new job."

"You think you know who did it?"

"I think so." Then, seeing the hope rise in his eyes, she hastened to amend: "But I'm not sure, Bob. I'm clutching at a tiny straw, and the police may laugh at me. Yet in my heart I feel that it must be right."

"What is it? Tell me."

"Come over to the desk, here."

She drew forth a large envelope and emptied it of its contents in front of them.

"A week or so ago," she explained, "Joan and I were talking about her father. She knows he was innocent, of course. And I believe he was."

"So do I!" Bob agreed heartily. "Her father never killed a man."

"No. But he was hanged for it. Here's the whole story of the case. I had these photostatic copies made from newspapers I found in the public library. I was convinced that Joan should try to prove her father's innocence, even at this late date, to preserve her own peace of mind. She can't let herself be happy, Bob. She tried to believe that once you and she were married, the world would forget Joan Barrett, but the memory was always there, haunting her."

"I know. There was something in her eyes, at times. But I never wanted to ask her."

He picked up the papers, looked them over carefully. "Why bother about this now?" he asked. "The case is closed. I want to find Joan."

"Just read these clippings over, Bob. Then I'll explain." Dorothy pointed to a carry-over on an inside page of the paper.

"Police are at a loss," Bob read out loud, "to find anybody who might have had a motive for killing Jeremiah Jordan. Mr. Jordan never made an enemy in his life, according to Charles Norton of Placerville, one of Mr. Jordan's closest friends, who saw the victim in San Francisco last Monday."

Bob wrinkled his brow. "Charles Norton, eh?" he repeated thoughtfully.

"Exactly," Dorothy said triumphantly. "Charles Norton of Placerville was in to see Jeremiah Jordan on Monday, the day before he was killed."

"Suppose," Dorothy went on, "suppose—oh, if only I dared hope it might be the truth! Suppose that Norton went in to see Jordan the day before his murder to sell him a mine—for $40,000 in cash."

"Good Lord!" Bob gasped. "You notice," Dorothy pursued, "that Norton made no mention of why he visited Jordan. And nobody—not even Thomas Barrett—knew for what purpose the money in the office was intended."

"And Norton might have played the same trick again—on John Hendry," Bob scarcely breathed the words.

"Yes. The irony is that Joan Barrett is the daughter of the very man who paid his penalty."

Bob jumped to his feet. "Dorothy!" he cried, "I believe your hunch is right. If we can only pin the murder of Mr. Hendry on Norton, we can solve the old case, too."

"And save Joan from a lifetime of mental agony," Dorothy pointed out.

"It's got to be true!" Bob declared. "It's got to be! Norton was the only other person who knew of the money this time."

"And by Heaven! I wouldn't put murder past him. Say, can I take these back and show them to Kennedy?"

"I want you to," Dorothy assured him. "I hesitated myself. I couldn't be sure how much they knew about San Francisco, and I didn't want to feed them information. But now that you see it the way I do—why, Bob, what's the matter?"

His face had suddenly dropped, and he sank into a chair despairingly.

"I just remembered," he said with a terrible bitterness in his voice. "Norton went to town with me on the same train—the 11:10 from Green Hills. He has a perfect alibi, and I'm the one who must substantiate it."

Anti-Jewish Drive Hits Vienna Films

Main Austrian Film Market Lies in Nazi-Controlled Germany

VIENNA.—(AP)—The Vienna public must go to an American or British cinema if it wants to see its native darling, Elizabeth Bergner.

This is the lament of "Die Stimme," prominent Jewish newspaper here, which says it is "The result of a cultural policy that pays for having let Jews go by losing art-conscious foreign markets."

Hidden Drive
 "Cold anti-Semitism"—a phrase used here—has been steadily but hidden pressure against Jews—is sweeping through nearly all phases of Austrian culture life.

"This activity of this anti-Jewish offensive is inspired from center supported by Nazi Germany," the paper declares.

Movies, theaters, schools, music, literature, are all feeling its subtle influence through quiet boycotts, dismissals, and refusals to hire Jews.

Says Plans Failed
 Because Aryan-minded Germany is its best prospective customer, the Austrian film industry had an added incentive to hire only non-Jews.

The plan was unsuccessful, however, "Die Stimme" declares, because Germany retained as frozen marks the money it paid for Austrian films. And such other markets as Holland and Sweden, displeased at the lower standard of Austrian pictures, started to favor American and British productions.

Avoid nervous fatigue.
 Avoid "inflammation of the ambition" (restlessness).

and a listless lethargy ensues.
 Developing Faith in Decisions
 Of course, this is inferiority, and, as I have mentioned before, inferiority can never be entirely cured. It is as much a part of the being as the color of the eyes.

Yet there are ways to encourage such a child, and he can become more sure of his judgment.

Why not force him to use his judgment as often as possible, and then, no matter what happens, stand by him?

He won't make any more mistakes than his independent brother, at that. The reason he fears his own judgment is fear of criticism. I find that inferior people are not cowards at all, and hear the results of mistakes quite bravely. What they really cringe from are words. They cannot endure the remarks of people, or even the silent thoughts of people, who criticize them.

Sometimes in a home, the uncertain child is the one chosen for most of the rebukes. It should be the other way 'round. He needs to be bolstered in spite of his poor judgment, which is poor about half the time because he is nervous and self-conscious.

Cause of Contrariness
 When I suggest forcing him, I do not mean to make it apparent. A mother can quietly work this out, according to the child's disposition. Often the less-confident one is contrary. His terror puts up a barrier to be reckoned with.

Letting him alone, to make up his mind, is one method. The inferior child usually does better by creating his own faith in himself. Give him many opportunities to work out his salvation and withhold as much comment as possible.

Create situations in which he must decide for himself what to do. Then make the family keep quiet. Ask his opinion about general matters. Praise him often, but not in suspicious overtones. Give him responsibilities, and, above all, never laugh at him.

"I want you to," Dorothy assured him. "I hesitated myself. I couldn't be sure how much they knew about San Francisco, and I didn't want to feed them information. But now that you see it the way I do—why, Bob, what's the matter?"

His face had suddenly dropped, and he sank into a chair despairingly.

"I just remembered," he said with a terrible bitterness in his voice. "Norton went to town with me on the same train—the 11:10 from Green Hills. He has a perfect alibi, and I'm the one who must substantiate it."

WITH THE LADIES

Cupid Lurks In Churches, Lasting Marriages Result From Love Linked to Religion

You are right, Dr. McKeever! There is no better place on this terrestrial sphere for young people to get acquainted than in church. Not nearly enough of them attend to fill the pews, either. At that, there are so many more sacraments than busses in the audience, too, that sometimes the hymns of praise lack balance.

Yes, Dr. McKeever, you are right! It is nice that you are getting a little fanfare and a great many trumpets as you organize your "lovers' church." The prevailing motive behind the idea, however, is not new. For years and years churches have been building reading rooms and recreational rooms—erecting a special annex for the purpose of fixing up the church basement—to encourage young people to social activities within the church.

Church Societies and Romance
 Whether or not it was the intention of the original Epworth League Society and Christian Endeavor group—young people's Sunday night gatherings—history of the movements show that Cupid has been a regular attendant at all services.

Therefore, Dr. W. A. McKeever, Oklahoma City psychologist and retired college professor, whose idea it is to follow spiritual devotionals with social affairs, is not so much an investigator as a follower. In a straightforward manner he believes that boys and girls, men and women, ought to know one another and he will provide a meeting place.

But it isn't new, Dr. McKeever, it isn't new! It's been a long time since an Intermediate Endeavor Society, which I knew in Ohio, played "Wink" in a big circle, while girls darted from one Sunday school chair to another, squealing with delight or chagrin all depending upon the romantic status of the youth who was the winker. (Wink, for some reason, is a game dedicated to young people playing games in churches.)

I remember a youthful game of hide-and-go-seek which some Bible school classes of boys and girls, coming together for a mid-week social, played one night. The auditorium and the pulpit were part of the hiding ground. Certainly it wasn't dignified or reverent, as the official board pointed out to us, and we never did it again. I quote the incident merely to show that romance, from puppy love to all the later varieties, is nothing new in religion!

Many Fell in Love
 A brief backward look shows that a goodly percentage of the boys and girls in that church who used to have sleighing parties, picnics and outdoor breakfasts together, fell in love and married when they were older.

Calling the roll in memory I cannot find a divorce in the group. Today, true to old tradition, once a month, following the Sunday night church services, 500 boys and girls from the ages of 15 to 25, meet for a social and devotional service and come because they like it.

There are other churches which follow the same program. Literally thousands of them. If young men and women, boys and girls, who want to meet people and have a natural, wholesome recreational life realized this fact, they would see one another in church much more frequently.

"But romance and church!" someone may exclaim. "Isn't it dreadful to combine them?"

Not one bit! The Young Man from Galilee whose name the churches bear, performed His first miracle at a wedding. It was in Cana of Galilee. From the Scriptural account everybody had a mighty good time.

I hope that Dr. McKeever's plan will interest every congregation which has been negligent in its interpretation of its social duty. May the pews be filled with young men and young women!

May the minister memorize his marriage ceremony from much repetition! (Copyright 1937, NEA Service, Inc.)

Mt. Pleasant Romps to Victory, 18 to 2

Texas Sandlot Champions Hand Lumberjacks Worst Defeat in History

The Williams Lumber company baseball team was handed its worst defeat in history Friday when the Mt. Pleasant, Texas, baseball club hammered four Hope pitchers for an 18 to 2 victory.

The Texas sandlot champions pointed upon Buswell's offerings for two runs in the opening inning and from then on virtually scored at will.

Successful Buswell were Parsons, Allen and Elliott. All were ineffective. The visitors crashed out two home runs, one clearing the left field wall and the other the right field fence.

The Lumberjacks go to Gurdion for a game Sunday afternoon with the Biene Lumber company team.

Heaven is not reached at a single bound! But we build the ladder by which we rise. From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies. And we mount to its summit round by round.

We rise by the things that are under feet. By what we have mastered of good and gain: By the pride deposed and the passion slain.

And the vanquished ills that we hourly meet. We hope, we aspire, we resolve, we trust.

When the morning calls us to life and light: But our hearts grow weary, and ere the night

Our lives are trailing the sordid dust. Wings for angels, but feet for men! We may borrow the wings to find the way—

We may hope, and resolve, and aspire and pray; But our feet must rise or we fall again.

Only in dreams is a ladder thrown From the weary earth to the sapphire walls; But the dreams depart and the vision falls.

And the sleeper wakes on his pillow of stone. Heaven is not reached at a single bound!

But we build the ladder by which we rise. From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies. And we mount to its summit round by round.—Selected.

Invitations from the graduating class 1937, Hope High School have reached my desk, and I thank those who so kindly remembered me. In pursuing these beautiful invitations, I soon fell into a reminiscent mood, and as usual when in that state of mind, I turned to my old friend and constant companion, since I was nine years old, my old scrap book, and found a copy of the first invitation ever sent out from a graduating class of the Hope High School, under date of June 16.—No, I am not naming the year, since the years that have gone over one's head seem to make quite a difference at this time, and it is the safest plan not to begin calling attention to whether one's judgment is approaching the deadline or not. But when I look at these beautiful invitations received this week, I begin to realize we have come a long way, but well do I remember the excitement caused by those little folded sheets of paper, and the thrill I received in sending mine out, and the great preparations made for the important day, and how we could hardly wait for the appointed time—we mounted into the clouds, and I am just wondering if some of us have ever come down. Rather unusual, but the entire class of eight—six girls and two boys are still living and doing their bit. Only two of us have remained in our home town, and the others have gone out into the world and accomplished some of the things dreamed of on that important day, and to the class of '37 who have the accomplishment of their dreams before them, I say Best Wishes and God Bless you! And special thanks to the two lovely girls and two handsome boys, that called last evening to allow me a glimpse of them in their beautiful banquet costumes—"All Hail to Youth!"

Mr. and Mrs. Al Park and Mr. and Mrs. T. Walters of Atlanta, Texas, were Friday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. M. Kinser.

Mrs. M. M. McCloyghan was hostess on Friday afternoon to the members of the Friday Bridge club and a number of extra guests, at her home on East Second street. Lovely pink Radin roses were used in developing a most attractive color scheme, and six tables were arranged for the play-ers. Favors went to Mrs. W. C. Warren, Mrs. Phil Dulin Jr., and Mrs. J. C. Carlton. Following the game, most tempting salad course was served with tea.

Miss Nannie Jeff of Fulton was the Friday guest of Mrs. Glen Williams.

Girl Scouts Troupe No. 1, Mrs. Clyde Monts, captain, held an investiture service at the Christian Bungalow on Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. V. A. Hammonds presiding. The mothers of the girls were guests, special guests included Miss Beryl Henry, superintendent city schools; Miss Mabel Ethridge and Mrs. J. R. Williams. Troupe members include the following: Mary Lee Cook, Marian Crutchfield, Frances Bruner, Margaret Bush, Rose Myra Dossert, Billy Irene James, Betty June Monte, Sarah Jane Murphy, Virginia O'Neil, Margie O'Neil, Elizabeth Rhea Wiggins, Frances Gwen Williams, Janie Sue Russell, Shirley Gibson, Carolyn Robertson, Ruth Bowden, Geraldine Whitner, Mary Joe Dickerson, Dorothy Ruth Dodd, Martha Jane Eason, Mary Jane Hearne and Frances Holloman.

Mrs. W. Y. Foster, Mrs. Dorsey McRae, Mrs. Clyde Hill and Miss Mabel Ethridge will spend the week-end in Shreveport, La., the guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Foster.

In celebration of their sister, Mrs. Glen Williams' birthday, Misses Marie and Nannie Purkins entertained a group of friends at a very delightful luncheon on Friday at their hospitable home on East Second street. Decorations in every detail were the decorations, with lovely varnished sweet peas as the chosen flower. The long luncheon table had a line of beauty with three bowls of rose pink sweet peas, with the long pink tapers interspersed casting a soft glow along the entire length of the table. Covers were laid for fourteen. The living room was most attractive with quantities of the chosen flower gracefully arranged in baskets and vases.

Miss Mary Evelyn Whitworth is spending the week-end with her sister, Miss Claudia in Henderson State Teachers College, Arkadelphia.

Tracy is seen as Fred Willis, circus barker, in the adaptation of the William Joyce Cowen best-seller, while Franchot TONE plays the small town bookkeeper, Jimmy Davis, who turns racketeer following the war. Gladys George is the Red Cross nurse, Rose Duffy, whom they both love.

Featured supporting roles include Cliff (Ukulele Ike) Edwards as Laro, Tracy's circus helper, and Mary Lou Treen as Saxe, Rose Duffy's fellow-nurse.

Robert Barrat, one of the cinema's most frequent "heavies," has had 25 fights in his last three years of film work. He "lost" 24 times, having only one "win" to his credit.

In his latest picture, "Mountain Justice," in which he appears with Josephine Hutchinson and George Brent, he takes the count again, at the hands of Miss Hutchinson. Her role is that of a mountain girl who battles for her life against her father, played by Barrat.

"Mountain Justice" comes Sunday, Monday and Tuesday to the Rialto.

V. A. Hammond, Pastor

Attendance this month at the church school is not quite up to the average for last month, but we have two Sundays to bring it up. Last month the average was 107, while so far this month we average only 97. Our goal for the month is 110. Come tomorrow morning and bring someone with you. Let's make it 110, "Out of the Red," Sunday.

The Loyalty Campaign makes progress. Thirty-two weeks of the year's budget have already been underwritten. Those who have not yet pledged should bring their signed pledge cards in Sunday. Let's make it a real "Every Member Canvass" with 100 per cent co-operation.

The "Honor Roll" carries the names of forty-five who have made weekly pledges to the Budget for the year, and often, who have signed tithing commitments. The name of every member of the church should be on the Honor Roll.

Sunday morning, May 20, we will dismiss our regular worship service to join the other churches of the city in the annual high school baccalaureate service at the Saenger Theater. Details of this service have not yet been given to the pastor.

Many sermons have been preached on the story of the prodigal, recorded in the 15th chapter of Luke, and almost without exception they have centered around the erring younger son, called by Jesus "The Prodigal Son." The pastor will speak Sunday morning on the subject, "The Prodigal's Brother," the character in the story who has been for the most part forgotten. It seems to us that of the two men, the "Prodigal" younger son was the most desirable character. The life of the "older brother" presents many striking lessons to us. Come worship with us Sunday morning.

"No girl I won't go with you! If you wanted to play hockey today, why didn't you tell me before I got all my lessons?"

ing and hear about him.
The sermon Sunday night, in the service beginning at 7:45, is on the subject, "Leading Others," and is based on Peter's saying, just after the death of Jesus, "I am going fishing." The story recorded in the early part of the 21st chapter of John is an inspiring record of men, and of the power of example. It, too, has many lessons for the modern Christian.

Attendance at the night service has been growing better for several weeks past, but there will be plenty of room for you and your friend. Come and worship with us. You'll be glad you came, and we will be glad with you.

HOPE GOSPEL TABERNACLE

Bert Webb, Pastor

Keep up the steady growth in Sunday school attendance, a few more each Sunday will eventually reach hundreds who are not in attendance anywhere. We invite you to visit the Tabernacle Sunday school.

The pastor will preach at both the 11 o'clock morning service and the evening evangelistic service at 7:45. Two especially interesting messages are in prospect. Join the great crowd that fills the Tabernacle each Sunday night. Good music and singing is always a feature of the services.

Children's Church and Christ's Army Band meet at 8:45.
Spend an enjoyable hour Sunday night, at the Tabernacle, it is Hope's full-gospel center.

Thieves Work Two Months LINCOLN, Neb.—(AP)—Thieves who went to the trouble of removing 200 pounds of scrap lead from 650 caskets at the Orthopedic hospital here are going to be disappointed.
Hospital attendants estimate it took two months to spirit the metal away. It's worth less than $25, they said.
It has been estimated that 525,000 children attend London's schools daily.

10 Miles For A Call

WEST POINT, Neb.—(P)—George Deitel's cow walked 10 miles for her foster twin calves.

The cow and the twins were shipped to West Point from Chadron for Deitel. He thought ten miles too far to drive the calves so left them in the stockyard here and drove the cow to his farm.

But the cow didn't like that arrangement. She broke out of pasture and walked back to the stockyards in search of the calves.

Deitel was called to get her. Deitel solved things by loading the foster mother and the twins in a motor truck and taking them to his farm. Now they are quite content—reunited.
